Board Cannot Enforce It Unless Administration Carries Out Regulations.

Law Ignored Completely.

Law Ignored Completely.

Speaking of the critichen of the board by the tax rate committee, Paul of Croce, who is one of the best-known leaders of prganized labor in Memphis and a former president of the State Pederation of Labor, said Tuesday. The civil service rules, in my opinion, should apply to every man appointed to the fire or police departments. Applicants must file certificates of good moral character and must be in good mysical condition to pass the board tests. But the trouble is that for years little attention has been paid by the gity administrations to the civil service. Men with political pull have no need to pass the civil service examinations. Therefore they do not make application for examination. The trouble seems to be that the law is not mandatory or is simply ignored. If public sentiment demanded of each city administration that the civil service rules be enforced, a better class of policemen would be second.

Maj. Robert Warwick, who only recently returned from service with Gen. Perabling's troops overseas and who has lad time since then to appear in his first picture in many months, is the star of "Secret Service," the thrilling melodrama of the Civil war which is a feature on the current bill at Loew's Lyceum. The story is one of romance and gripping adventure and has to do with the secret service department in the perilous times 60 years ago. The randeville headliner is the Eugene roupe of European athletes, whose stunts are daring and of a whirliving nature. Others on the current bill include the Stylish Four in a revue of songs; and dances. Dudley Douglas, a versatile chap with new comedy and songs; Hall and Tyson in a skit, "I want a Kiss," and Fred Pedro in novely juggling. Loew's News Weekly and other short reels complete the bill.

Majestic.

Majestic.

Pauline Frederick revels in gorgeous aiment. She delights in wearing gowns thich echo the last word in feminine ashions and the more of them she can purpopriately display in her pictures, he happier she is. In "One Week of die," which is the attraction today at the Majestic, her sartorial opportunities are even greater than in "The Voman on the Index." Happily cast in a dual role, she is enabled to look magnificent as Mrs. Kingstey Sherwood and charmingly unassuming as darion Roche, who comes to New York or the first time to join the artists' olony.

Strand.

Strand.

Aurora Mardiganian, heroine of the "Auction of Souls" now playing at the Strand, underwent untoid tortures during her two years' captivity in the hands of the Turks. She is the daughter of a former prosperous banker at Harpout, and was 13 years old when the war broke out. Being a beautiful girl, she attracted a Turkish official, who wished to make her his wife, imposing upon her his own religion and the lowly state of Turkish women.

Her father refused to give her up. When the misseacres of the Armenians started, carried on by the Turks under a secret agreement with the Germans, the Mohammedans made further efforts to get possession of the girl After seeing her, father, mother, two brothers and three sisters brutally slain, she entered upon a series of adventures which prove that life may be more exciting than the widest dream of the fictionist.

Princess.

The Girl Who Stayed at Home, another of D. W. Griffith's great stories and one which takes a decidedly different angle from those of his famous successes in the past, will be the attraction for Tuesday only at the Princess theater. "The Girl Who Stayed at Home" presents Clarine Sey, mour in the leading role, supported by Robert Harroun and others equally well known. The plot centers about "Cutle Beautiful," a pretty cabaret girl, who promises to remain true to her sweetheart while he is in France, and the many temptations and how she weathers them are unfolded in one of the most pleasing romaness of the year. Another episode of "The Master Mystery," featuring Houdini, will also be shown.

BIBLE CLASS OVER

Character Builders First Sought $25,000 Secure $42,964 -- More Coming.

The $40,000 building fund for the Character Builder Bible class was subscribed in a single day. When the teams reported to Joseph R. Hyde, campaign director.
